About the Glendale Family Advocacy Center

The Partnership

The Glendale Family Advocacy Center (GFAC), established in 1998, is a partnership between the Glendale Police Department, A New Leaf, Child Protective Services, Scottsdale Health Examiners, Phoenix Children's Hospital, and the Maricopa County Attorney's Office. Designed to be a "one stop center" for victims of violence, child abuse, and sex crimes; the center is available for residents and law enforcement agencies throughout the West Valley.

The GFAC includes facilities for forensic interviews, medical examinations, therapy, and consultation between law enforcement personnel and victim services personnel.

The goal of the GFAC is to provide comprehensive and coordinated services to crime victims in a safe, comfortable, and convenient setting.

There are many facets of the criminal justice system that can be confusing if you do not have the information or the support you need. The Glendale Victim Assistance staff offers support in:

- Coping with the effects of trauma
- Crisis counseling
- Safety planning
- Rights afforded to a crime victim
- Current status of a criminal case
- Criminal Justice System Procedures
- Orders of Protection or Injunctions Against Harassment
- 911 cellular phone loans
- Victim Compensation claims
- Civil options and small claims court
- Resource and referral

Glendale Victim Assistance staff can act as a liaison between the victim and the various agencies involved, not only to keep the victim informed, but also giving the victim a voice.

Medical Services

Medical professionals from Phoenix Children's Hospital and Scottsdale Health Care (Sexual Assault Response Team) provide physical examinations for victims of sexual abuse, child abuse and neglect cases.

Counseling Services

A New Leaf's Advocacy Center staff provides brief advocacy and counseling services for victims of sexual abuse and violence. Master's level counselors provide short-term crisis counseling for individuals and families, along with group counseling that utilizes solution-focus therapy.
